INTERNATIONAL NEONATOLOGY – SWISS COOPERATION

In contrast to other pediatric age groups, the mortality rates of newborns worldwide are not decreasing. It is our duty as health care professionals (neonatologists, pediatricians, obstetricians, midwives, nurses), and indeed as human beings from a wealthy country, to support efforts to improve the care of newborn infants in far less favored areas of the world.

The Annual Meeting of the Swiss Society of Neonatology, which will take place in Geneva on Friday, January 16, 2015, seeks to build bridges between us and health care professionals from low- and middle-income countries. We would like to explore educational and technical possibilities to get involved in programs addressing the needs of neonates in these countries.

We invite you to attend this meeting to share your knowledge and personal experience. The meeting was purposefully scheduled to take place before a weekend to allow for further discussions on current and future projects during an informal dinner.
